

The Alliance of the Libertarian Left is a decentralized alliance of radical individualists, agorists, mutualists, libertarian socialists, and others on the libertarian left.

We're organizing local activist groups to fight for individual freedom, peace, and social solidarity in our communities, using the tools of education, nonviolent direct action, and cooperative counter-institutions - not petitions, party politics, or symbolic protests.

A Grand Alliance For Liberty

Introducing the

Why libertarian?

We want a world in which each individual is free to decide how to live his or her own life - free to do anything that does not infringe on another person's equal liberty.

Why left?

The left side of libertarianism does not bother with appeasing the establishment. It is revolutionary. Free-marketeters like Bastiat work with mutualists like Proudhon to create a clear and consistent path toward liberty. Authoritarian social relationships and cultural tendencies are opposed because they restrict the freedom of the individual and support political tyranny.

Why activist?

We can only get the world we seek if we work for it. To achieve a world in which people are not expected to pay allegiance to any coercive organization requires a revolutionary change. The fundamental ideas that govern human relations must be overturned in favor of liberty, equality, solidarity, and consent. Ideas that embolden tyrants and enable mass oppression must be destroyed if we are to be free. Attempted justifications for oppression are always irrational and prevent humankind from unleashing its true potential.

Electoral politics cannot deliver liberty. Liberty must be seized by the individual, then secured by cooperating individuals. To do so requires those serious about liberty to communicate, network, and build. The Alliance of the Libertarian Left does all three.

We communicate - We do not hold back in our advocacy for a free society. We use every method of communication and every form of media at our disposal.

We network - Alliance of the Libertarian Left groups are forming across the planet. The contacts made through ALL activities present endless opportunities for further activism.

We build - ALLies are working on counter-establishment projects that will empower individuals and communities to survive apart from, and eventually in opposition to, all attempted governance.

We would like you to join our struggle for liberation.
